Pure Religion

We tend to view the word 'religion' with suspicion in our culture. To us it may mean a system of religion tied to a specific set of beliefs. The word carries with it connotations of high church ritual and practice. It is heavily structured, defined by tradition and filled with jargon that is nearly imperceptible to outsiders. Today the word often has negative connotations.

In the Bible however, it had different connotations. Especially in the New Testament, the word refers to religious service or religious acts. It means, "the things you do because you are religious." For the Jews it would have included things like tithing and offering sacrifices. It would also apply to things like helping those less fortunate and providing shelter to the homeless. Those things could also be described as "acts of righteousness."

How does that help us understand passages like James 1:27 where it says, "Religion that God our father accepts as pure and faultless is this; to look after orphans and widows in their distress and to keep oneself from being polluted by the world?" I think to fully understand that verse one needs to read the verse before it. Verse 26 says, "If anyone considers himself religious and yet does not keep a tight reign on his tongue, he deceives himself and his religion is worthless." ? Here James contrasts worthless religion with pure religion.

Before jumping into interpretation, let's set a little context around it. In verses 19 and 20, he talks about how anger can lead Christians away from a godly lifestyle. In verse 19 he says, be quick to listen, slow to speak and slow to become angry. In verse 20 he says that man's anger does not bring about the righteous life God desires. It seems James knows of some in his audience who were easily angered and made poor choices when angry; particularly in what they said.

After this he speaks of consistently putting into practice what they have been taught. To hear it and not practice it is hypocrisy but hearing the teachings of Jesus and putting them into practice is the goal.

Then comes verse 26, saying that if you claim to be religious and yet don't allow your faith to change how you treat people in what you say then your claims are false. You are a hypocrite. Pure religion not only treats people right in speech but also helps those in need. It goes beyond the speaking and gets to the doing.

It is not likely that someone is going to help another with whom they have spoken harshly. However, when they speak words of kindness, it is far more likely that help is going to follow kind words.

As Jesus followers we are challenged by the words of James to be in control of what we say. Whether online or in digital communication or face to face we must be vigilant to keep a watch on what we say, making sure we speak words that reflect Jesus. Even when angry we must either keep our mouths shut or have the self-control to speak words of love and honor. To do otherwise is hypocrisy. It is good to do nice things for others and help others when they need help. But helping the needy does not make up for a caustic and sharp tongue. If you want your religion to be pure, James seems to suggest that it takes both good deeds and kind words. One or the other just will not be enough.

Dios Le Bendiga! (God Bless You!)

Hello my West Side Family!

Our walk in this life has brought us right here where we are. For so many, those days have ceased, but for us, continue. And we are still here because there is a purpose, a plan. Most of the time, we forget about that purpose and we live our life involved or wrapped in the "business" of the daily way. Working, working and more working we pass our days and we don't notice that our life is passing in front of us. We are so busy thinking we still have all of our life in front, when we don't even know if today will be our last day. Jesus, teaching about that, mentioned a man who was planning to accumulate more than he can have for the "rest" of his life, "But God said to him, 'You fool! This very night your life will be demanded from you. Then who will get what you have prepared for yourself?'" Lk. 12:20 I know that we have a responsibility for our own family, but when we study and understand the Word of God, He makes it clear that it is not according to how we see and live our life that is the proper way, but it's according to His plan, his purpose. But this understudying will come only when we submit ourselves to the Lord completely and not only on those occasions when we are in need or trouble, but when we realize that we don't depend on ourselves but from the Lord. So, if God is letting us still walk in this life, it is because he has a plan for us. Let's be obedient to his voice and do his Will.
