When you Don't Know What's Next (edited for space)

by Ashli Roussel

The very fact that we sometimes say, "I don't know what I'm doing with my life" indicates the kind of culture we come from, one that values having things planned out for your future. I sat recently with four girls around a table who quit jobs (or in one's case, turned down several offers) to serve in Africa for a time, and then we will go back home for...who knows what? A fresh start?

We may not know exactly what the next season of our future looks like, but we do know what we are doing with our lives. We know what our lives are about and who we are living for. But because of pressure to have things figured out, being in a place of short-term uncertainty can exaggerate into making you feel like you don't know what you're doing with your entire life. But people still like to ask the question, "What are you doing next?" It's what started this whole conversation in the first place.

People are obsessed with what's next. Our lives follow a natural progression of what is expected to happen next. Even from an early age, every young person grows up looking forward to the next stage of life, and they usually know exactly what that stage is: primary school to high school to college to getting a job. Now here we are as young adults, and suddenly the "what's next" is a little less defined. What do we now? In fact, it's now more what we make of it than what is expected of us.

As we were discussing these things, a girl chimed in, "It's just hard to stop the thing you're doing now without knowing that's next." My head nodded in agreement. That's where I am. And I have a feeling that I'm not alone at this junction. We can either be paralyzed at the point of decision, or we can take the next step on the journey into the unknown.

I'm learning that life is so much more about the journey than the destination. It's about the process instead of the finish. Perhaps God is less interested in where we end up and more interested in how we go about getting there. Facing unknowns is just an expected part of this pilgrimage.

As we go into the unknown, are we seeking the Lord there? Do we want him more than we want control of the future? Do we wait faithfully, or do we take matters into our own hands? Does the flesh or the Spirit guide our thinking process? Do we weigh options logically or spiritually?

Once a decision is finally made, we realize that the actual point of decision was anti-climactic compared to the beautiful process of seeking God in the process. Although our culture is obsessed with what's next, and we are subconsciously pressured to plan and prepare for whatever that is, sometimes the most faithful and obedient thing is to not have the next thing figured out. Instead, walk straight into the unknown without having everything in place. That's where you must have faith, and that's where God loves to show up.

It's a glorious sacrifice to make, to go to Africa and give up all the conveniences of America. You'll get attention and praise for doing that. But you know what's also a sacrifice, just not a glorious one? Walking forward into the unknown of your future without having any definitive plans. No one will congratulate you for that, but sometimes it's the most obedient and faithful thing to do, and we know that God sees what is done in secret and rewards those kinds of sacrifice. Walk the road of uncertainty with grace, joy, and peace, and others will see how you manage it in an otherworldly way. It's countercultural. It's the harder thing. Harder than figuring out what's next is resting with contentment in the in-between.

DIOS LE BENDIGA! (God Bless You!)

by Aris Ortiz

Acts 2.41 "Those who accepted his message were baptized, and about three thousand were added to their number that day." Acts 2:7 "praising God and enjoying the favor of all the people. And the Lord added to their number daily those who were being saved." Acts 4.4 "But many who heard the message believed; so the number of men who believed grew to about five thousand." Acts 5.14 "Nevertheless, more and more men and women believed in the Lord and were added to their number." Acts 6:7 "So the word of God spread. The number of disciples in Jerusalem increased rapidly, and a large number of priests became obedient to the faith." Acts 8:12 "But when they believed Philip as he proclaimed the good news of the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women."

I feel a great joy reading these passages!! It makes me happy every time when I read about how many obeyed the message of salvation of Jesus Christ. And that is my prayer, that every person who will hear the gospel, can obey Christ and to be faithful always! Let us preach and teach about the Gospel of salvation my West Side family, and The Lord will be glorified. Blessings to you!

One of the easiest ways to get involved at the CCSC is to come to our weekly worship - Midweek. Come worship, listen to a message from scripture, and make new friends! Show up early for cookies. Stay late and hang out. Midweek happens on Wednesdays at 7pm.

REgroups also meet throughout the semester on various nights. These relational environments are great ways for you to grow in your faith while you are building friendships that will last for years. Our desire is to create a family for you to belong to so we can together grow as disciples of Christ.
